Hotel Management System

Final Project's Report

Introduction

The Hotel Management System is a small application that allows hotel staff (e.g.: receptionists) and guests to interact with the system from a graphical interface (GUI) and each have access to a separate window since they have different access levels.

Staff Window Features

- Login button to sign in as a client
- View all or only current clients
- View all or only available rooms
- View all bookings
- Book a room for a client
- Check out a client
- Search for client
- Search for room
- Update room
- Add room
- Add client

Client Window Features

- Login button to sign in as staff
- View available rooms
- Search rooms by room type
- Search by price range
- Book a room

Challenges

We faced many challenges along the way. Making a jar file that connected with the database was an issue for us, but we managed to fix it. We also had some difficulties using GitHub to merge our work, since it was our first time needing to do this. Of course, coding the whole project and learning new things along the way was also a challenge, since we have many other assignments, finals and projects at the same time. Also, since we did not completely understand how to start from the beginning, we made a first version of the project that was inefficient for a database, so we restarted. Similarly, there were things that we understood along the way that required us to change many things in our project, such as the language translation. However, all in all, this project was an excellent learning experience!

Learning Outcomes

We got to learn many concepts related to JavaFX, including its different types of controls and layouts. The different database methods using java. The interaction with I18N Java classes, Resource Bundle and Locale classes. The most important things we learned is translation, GUI with javaFX and connection to the database. Now, we can make important projects with this knowledge.
